Sexta edición. Resistencia de. It is well known in the prior art that olefins may be polymerized via various polymerization techniques such as, for example, solution polymerization, suspension polymerization, etc. The term $\text{C}_2\text{-C}_{20}$ mono-olefin as used in this specification and the claims refers to a unbranched or straight chain $\text{C}_2\text{-C}_{20}$ hydrocarbon having only one double bond such as ethylene, propylene, butene-1, pentene-1, hexene-1, heptene-1, octene-1, etc. It is also known in the art that monomeric olefins such as mono-olefin monomers may be oligomerized or polymerized with catalyst systems containing two different types of catalysts in two different polymerization stages. The catalyst system in the first stage may be a so-called hydrogen transfer catalyst and the catalyst system in the second stage may be a so-called acidic catalyst. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 4,409,039 teaches an oligomerization process using a catalyst system comprising a hydrogen transfer catalyst and an acidic catalyst in separate polymerization stages, wherein the molar ratio of hydrogen transfer catalyst to acid catalyst is about 1:1 to about 10:1. U.S. Pat. No. 4,871,820 discloses a two-stage polymerization process in which an alkylaluminum halide is added to an ethylene polymerization reactor to form a solid product having high molecular
