Q: jQuery mobile: Load only pages that come after specified anchor tag I am loading specific pages dynamically in a jQuery Mobile application. I'd like to define which pages can be loaded and which ones cannot. Let's say for example that I want to load all the elements that are included after an anchor tag with the id "next" Next ... .. How can I do that? A: You can load the "next" page only if the ID of the previous page is known: `$('#a').on('click', function(){ if(document.referrer!== document.location){ $.mobile.changePage('/next'); } });` However, if your application is large and you just want to load the "next" page, I would suggest triggering a callback on the "back" event and making this call to load the next page: $('a').on('click', function(){

  if(document.referrer!== document.location){
    $('a').trigger('back'); $.mobile.changePage('/next'); }
});

Back to your use case, this would have the exact same effect as yours but in a slightly more maintainable way:

$('#next').on('click', function(){
  $('a').on('click', function(){
    if(document.referrer!== document.location){

>Q: How to pass params as an option from json data in an external drop down?
I'm looking to pass options from a json data source into an external drop down after I call the controller.

$(document).ready(function () { debugger;
$("#council_ids").change(function () { var id = $(this).val(); $.ajax({ type: 'post', url: '@Url.Action("DisplayCouncils", "Admin")', data: { council_id: id }, success:
function (result) { debugger; $("#council").empty(); $.each(result, function (i,
item) { $("#council").append( "" + item.Name

VINTAGE

The Lands Between are in an era before order, and even the raindrops have begun to form a sky full of dark clouds. The Lofty Lords - the famous and well known heroes and characters - have lived for countless centuries to ensure an everlasting order in the Lands Between. They venture out in order to secure the security of the lands, ensuring the safety of the inhabitants and, in many cases, to uphold the balance of civilizations. The Lands Between have a precarious history as there are many taboo subjects. While it is a world full of rumors and legends, the true history of the world is entirely different from what people think.

THE WAY TRAVEL

The Lands Between are divided into twelve provinces, each with a story of its own. From this tranquil world, the Lands Between are connected by a magic river known as the Evil River. Although the Elder Wizards have many different ways to travel between the provinces, the presence of the Evil River has forever separated the provinces from each other. The Elder Wizards, however, use a half-mile-long magic rope called the "Route Connector" to cross the river, allowing them to quickly cross the river. The Wraiths have another strange method called the Vale Spelunker, through which they can travel to the destination without ever using the Route Connector. It is said to be an impossible method to travel, but they make a huge effort to master this method.
